

Expodium

Are you a freelancer? What if you can have a stable income as a freelancer?

What if I can take away your biggest fear?

Are you looking for a freelancer? What if we can give you the best freelancer for your job? What if all your requirements can be fulfilled in one single job?

Let's take away the "what if" from above sentences. I have actually found a way to reward you for your hard work. I know your pain. I have been there. I was a freelancer. A successful freelancer! Working 16-18 hours a day, still I had no savings. I was full of insecurities and fear. I was anxious for my retirement. Today, I own a company. I help other freelancers to get a life they deserve.

As a Managing Director, I often had trouble finding people with required skill sets. I had no way to find out if a freelancer was genuinely good or they had their friends review them online. I was looking for a way to bridge this gap between project managers and freelancers.

I looked for forums where freelancers and project owners discussed their strategies for future gain. None of them were optimistic about them. I was tired of these pursuits. I decided to do something about my future and your future too.

Expodium is my humble effort to create and support the freelancer community. It is a boon for both employers and workers. Everything is automated and managed to perfection. This will make your life easy as a breeze. The secret, we all work and learn together. Designing, maintenance and marketing all in one place. If you have a dream, we have the resources to make them come true!

It is not about me, it is about you and how you can earn and learn at the same time. On our platform you can actually manage your complete project and divide it among different freelancers with the required skill sets. If you fumble, you can ask your fellow workers to help you out. Seek help and get rewarded at the same time. You can even find a business analyst to divide and manage your project, while you can keep tap of the progress.

Just like a multinational company who handles full project for their client, but ours is much more affordable, transparent and easy to access. We have divided our platform in three departments.

1. For clients
2. For freelancers
3. A discussion forum for both clients and freelancers

As a project manager you can upload your requirement on our portal and find people with required skills to complete various milestones of your project like website designing for one, A/B testing to other, data management to third and so on. All these freelancers will remain in touch with each other and complete your projects as per your instructions. You can make a payment once each of them finishes their module.

Key features include:

1. Agile workflow manager
2. Content management system
3. Version control
4. Mailing system
5. Collaboration between all project members.

After the completion of the project, you can easily export the contents of your project to a Photoshop plugin and download it for further use. In addition to that you get access to a GitHub directory with all your files and coding material.

As a freelancer, the scope for your work increase when you work as a team. You can share your load, learn new skills, best of all you learn management techniques that are useful in both personal and professional life. You are no longer alone. Make friends and join our discussions on social media platform. More you interact with others, more you learn and more you earn through our rewards section. You can create your own team of experts online and take bigger projects.

That's not all. While working as a freelancer, I saw many ill practices. Some clever freelancers get their peers to review them and rank higher, providing mediocre services. Not on our platform. Here, you get a chance to show off your real talent to the world. You can write articles, join discussions, present your opinion and give valuable insight about the topic of your choice. This enables the community to recognize you on the basis of your expertise.
